The global food and beverage industry is not standing still, and neither is the U.S. dairy industry. Throughout the supply chain—from farm families, to milk processors, to product and ingredient manufacturers—the U.S. dairy industry continues to ramp up investments and deliver an expanded range of dairy products which fulfill customers' evolving product and business needs. Explore the U.S. Dairy Pavilion to meet with some of the U.S. industry's finest dairy suppliers and learn more about what the U.S. dairy industry has to offer.

Butter & Milkfat

U.S. manufacturers provide a variety of different butter and milkfat products processed under strict guidelines to meet stringent demands of global customers.

Cheese

The United States produces 600-plus types of delicious cheeses, including European-style selections such as cheddar and mozzarella alongside American-Originals like monterey jack, colby and cream cheese.

Lactose

A track record as the world's largest lactose producer and exporter makes the United States a trusted, go-to lactose source for feed, food and pharmaceutical uses.

Milk Powders

The United States is the world's largest skim milk powder producer and has ramped up capacity to deliver various powder options that meet customers' specifications.

Milk Proteins

U.S. manufacturers have become increasingly specialized in the production of milk proteins which offer a variety of functional benefits to expand development of protein packed foods and beverages.

Permeate

Rising production of U.S. whey and milk permeates is creating attractive new opportunities to utilize these versatile ingredients to enhance flavor, reduce sodium and lower costs too.

Whey Proteins & Ingredients

From whey protein concentrates and isolates to sweet whey and permeate, the United States produces whey ingredients in a wide range of protein levels to suit diverse customer formulation needs.

Yogurt, Ice Cream and Dairy Desserts

The United States is recognized for innovation and quality for frozen dairy desserts as well as tasty and nutritious yogurt products.
